

Love Times Ten Million by Robert Spaulding O.P.

It is funny, but then again, not funny at all, the way our lives work. All of the different emotions, all of the varying degrees in which we experience them. All of the freedom, all of the chains around our ankles and hearts. The entire big picture that is really a lot of small ones. And complex! Sometimes so complex is the picture of our lives that we can never come to understand it, and sometimes it is as simple and predictable as we need it to be. But never ever do we find ourselves questioning life more deeply than when we experience death. Never ever do we find ourselves in a state of complete confusion than when our worlds are turned upside down by the creation of a giant hole in our hearts that we know will never disappear. And so we seek. We seek answers. We seek ways to get through the day, a way back to the way we used to be. Before everything changed. Back when life was about life, and not death. And we long to understand the big picture, or at least some of the small ones.

Never ever do we find ourselves questioning life more deeply than when we experience death.

Suddenly and unwillingly we find ourselves trying to tap into the single grains of sand in the desert, or the single stars in the sky we know as "ourselves." And we try to tap into the people we Love and now have lost who have brought us into this place we never wanted to go. We grieve, and we want to smile and laugh again. We look for hope, and end up latching onto to the things in our lives that bring us that hope.

That is why I wish to share my experience one day with death that I have found to be a source of hope for myself when I am grieving. For one day, I was given the unfortunate blessing of a glimpse into the darkness, a tiny blip of the big picture of death. I understand that my story is as unique as I am, and I am convinced that every single person will experience their own story some day as well. But I am also keenly aware of many similarities in the stories I hear from others, the most prominent being the description of "Love" throughout the event. Yes, Love. That word as mysterious as death. That word opposite of death that describes what we want most in our lives.

My personal N.D.E. (Near Death Experience) came on an ordinary morning in May, 2000. Everything at home seemed to be going downhill, quite honestly. That previous February my father suffered a severe stroke and, though he survived, he lost half of his capacities and was nowhere near the man he once was. My marriage was not going well, and my kids had reached the age of rebellion. So going to work as an electrician was an escape for me, a way to get my mind free of life's challenges. As a bonus, it being a Saturday meant that none of the authorities would be around so I was able to sneak in a radio onto the construction site, and was blessed to be put to work in an area where I would be by myself and free to listen to it.

So with the radio blaring, I was my ordinary self, an ordinary electrician, singing along as loudly as I could, as I thoughtlessly grabbed a live wire and connected myself electrically through my wrist watch to the ceiling grid. And 277 Volts came through me, leaving me unable to move or free myself. Unfortunately, what makes 277 Volts the number one killer voltage of electricians is that when you lock into it you don't simply cause an explosion. Instead, what happens is that the electricity keeps running through you, and your muscles and tendons instantly lock up and start to squeeze so tightly that eventually you get crushed to death, inside out. And I can attest that it hurts really bad.

What I didn't like more than the pain, however, was that I didn't black out. My mind stayed active, so I knew I was helplessly locked on and in serious trouble. Instantly it became clear, I was not getting free. "Oh no," I thought after a very brief fight, "I'm going to be in the paper." And that's when I had a forever moment, a moment of accepting that I was dying.

I had a forever moment, a moment of accepting that I was dying.

TEN MILLION

Oddly enough, and harder to explain enough, rather than ending everything started happening instead. I suddenly became filled with a rush of emotion that I can only describe as "Love times ten million." I felt this great joy, almost as though I was laughing even though I couldn't, and everything was as peaceful as I had never before felt it to be. My eyes, which were locked looking down at the floor because my chin was locked into my chest, started glossing over and the floor became blurred by a light, which grew larger as it came towards me. (I remember thinking, "Hey, the light is coming to me, I thought I was supposed to go toward IT!")

And then, when the light completely came over me, I saw in it my youngest daughter, Elizabeth, who was 9 years old at the time, and definitely daddy's baby girl. I was still filled with Love times ten million as I saw her looking upon me with total fear and sadness on her face, so I cried out in my mind "Don't be afraid Lizzie! I Love you so much! I'm never going to leave you! I promise you I'm never going to leave you!"

I do not know to this day what inspired me to say those words; it was as if I wasn't speaking them myself. But it was also like she couldn't hear me anyway. And just like that, I don't know how, there was Sarah in her place, my second youngest. She had that same look of fear and she was crying and I cried out the same thing, "Don't be afraid, I'm not leaving you, I'll always be with you. I Love you!" Then there was Glenn, then Andy, then Curt. Same thing for all three. I remember thinking "Wow, they're coming youngest to oldest." And I remember that I was not sad or afraid, only filled with Love times ten million, and the peace and joy that came with it.

I remember that I was not sad or afraid, only filled with Love times ten million, and the peace and joy that came with it.

Finally then, right at the moment my oldest daughter, Melissa, flashed into my view, I found myself lying on the floor, tools scattered all about and my legs tangled up into the 8' ladder that was laying on its side. "Oh no," I thought and probably said aloud, as the Love times ten million feeling had stopped but I still felt no pain, "Oh no." I didn't want to be back.

"Don't be afraid,
I'm right here,
I Love you."

On that day I will relive every day for the rest of my life, May 6, 2000, I had lived through the horrible experience of death being turned into the powerful experience of "Love times ten million." And Love times ten million, after all, is what I claim we all seek, more than everything else in life. Along with life, death, and the big picture, I think that the loss of someone we Love will always be something we never grasp. But I also think that this experience is something close to what all people will find in death.

In 2007 my father succumbed to the effects of his stroke, and all I can picture is that place I once was, that place of Love times ten million. And I find peace in believing that he is there today, telling me what I had told my children, "Don't be afraid, I'm right here, I Love you."

My hope for all who are grieving is that we all hear those same words coming from those we miss so badly. Because when we do, our sorrow will be one tick more bearable. When we keep ourselves in the Love their lives brought to us life will become about life again, rather than death. I speak from that lousy experience and invite everyone to try!

It's funny, the way it all works, but then again, not really funny at all... but there is hope. ❖

by Ruth Becker • Review by Molly Nicholson

Having the title "widow" thrust upon you is an overwhelming and foreboding event. It alters the core of your self-identity, and adjusting to this new concept of yourself can seem to be an insurmountable challenge. There is no "right" way to navigate the path of widowhood, it is an entirely unique and intimately personal journey for each widow. Left Alone is an account of Ruth Becker's personal struggles and triumphs coupled with the wisdom she has gleaned through adapting to her new life as a widow.

Becker's Left Alone is rife with Christian overtones and biblical verses as she explores the personal tragedy that left her a widow. While the book begins as a completely personal narrative, it branches into an incredibly supportive, uplifting, and inspiring book. Through straightforward chapter titles, the book progresses through emotions Becker experiences, helpful and hurtful reactions of others, helping her children cope with their grief journeys, other widows' stories and reactions to their loss, and what life entails after becoming a widow.

Becker encourages introspection for new widows to assess what they feel will best accommodate their personal grief and listen to what their souls and bodies are trying to communicate. Her gentle suggestions for steps toward healing are completely unassuming and filled with encouragement and empowerment. While Becker stumbles along her widowhood path, she never hesitates to use God as her compass to continue growing and learning from her experience. ❖

Orange Chicken, Peppers & Onions from WomansDay.com

ACTIVE TIME: 20 minutes

INGREDIENTS:

- 1 cup long-grain white rice
- 2 Tbsp olive oil
- 1-6 oz boneless, skinless chicken breast, cut into thirds
- Kosher salt and black pepper
- 1/2 small onion, sliced
- 1/2 red bell pepper, sliced
- 1 clove garlic, chopped
- 1 orange, juiced (1/4 cup)
- 4 pitted Kalamata olives, halved

DIRECTIONS: Cook the rice according to package directions. Meanwhile, heat 1 Tbsp oil in a large skillet over medium-high heat. Season chicken with 1/8 tsp salt and a pinch of pepper and cook on one side for 3 minutes. Turn and move to one side of the skillet. Add the onion, bell pepper, garlic and remaining 1 Tbsp oil to the skillet' season with 1/8 tsp salt and a pinch of pepper. Cook, stirring occasionally, until just tender, 3 to 4 minutes. Add the orange juice and olives, and simmer until the vegetables are tender and the chicken is cooked through, about 2 minutes. Serve over rice. ❖
